COMMENTS OF CENTRAL TELEPHONE COMPANY

I. Introduction

Central Telephone Company ("Centel"), on behalf of itself and its affiliated local exchange companies ("LECs"), hereby submits its comments in response to the Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, FCC 92-203, released May 6, 1992 ("Notice"), in the above-referenced proceeding. In the Notice, the Commission proposes to require LECs to provide three-digit N11 codes to enhanced service providers. For the reasons set forth below, Centel opposes the Commission's proposal.

II. Discussion

A. The Commission's Proposal Would Cause Confusion Among Consumers

The Commission proposes to require LECs to make available dialing arrangements using the service codes 211, 311, 511, and 711 unless these codes are assigned for other uses by Bellcore.^{1/} Additionally, LECs that do not use the service codes 611 and/or 811 would be required to make these codes available unless they are assigned for other uses by Bellcore.

Notice at ¶ 12. Under the Commission's proposal, the N11 codes would be made available to enhanced service providers and possibly other entities as well. Id. at ¶ 14.

Centel does not believe that the unused N11 codes should be made available for abbreviated dialing. Traditionally, N11 codes have been associated with special telephone company access or emergency services. In particular, LECs have made a substantial investment in educating consumers regarding the use of the 411, 611 and 811 codes to access directory assistance, repair and business office services.^{2/} Typically, LEC telephone directories and other promotional literature advertise the availability of such codes and educate consumers on how to use them.^{3/} The LECs' efforts to educate consumers regarding the use of the 411, 611 and 811 codes have been successful. As consumers travel around the country, they are able to access LEC services easily, using the same N11 codes with which they are familiar and on which they rely.

The Commission's N11 proposal would disrupt this orderly scheme and cause substantial confusion among consumers. First, consumers desiring to access emergency services (911), directory

^{2/} In addition, the Commission does not appear to be aware that LECs are using the other N11 codes for internal purposes. For example, the codes 211, 311, 511 and 711 are being used by some LEC technicians for testing and dispatch purposes.

^{3/} See Exhibit 1 for examples of Centel directory listings and promotional literature.

assistance (411) or a LEC's business office (611, 811)^{4/} may become confused by the multiplicity of N11 codes in use.^{5/} Second, consumers may become confused when they discover that the N11 code that was assigned to a particular enhanced service in Las Vegas has not been assigned to the same enhanced service in Washington, D.C., or that while the 811 code can be used to access a LEC's business office in most areas of the country, it cannot be used for that purpose in other areas of the country. Third, consumers may become confused and frustrated when, after finally mastering the variety of N11 codes, the N11 codes are recalled for NANP purposes.^{6/}

For these reasons, Centel believes that the public interest would be served best by holding the N11 codes not associated with special telephone company access or emergency services in reserve

^{4/} In North Carolina, consumers can also use the 711 code to access Centel's business office. See Exhibit 2.

^{5/} Consumers may become confused when attempting to determine which codes access telephone company services and which codes access enhanced services. In addition, due to the similarity of the numbers, consumers may mis-dial the N11 codes more frequently.

^{6/} If the Commission decides to make the unused N11 codes available, Centel supports the requirement that the assignment of codes be made subject to discontinuance on six months notice if the codes are needed for NANP uses. Anything less than six months would make it extremely difficult to re-educate consumers on the change of the use of the codes. The Commission should also prevent N11 codes from being hoarded, the way carrier identification codes are being hoarded today, by requiring that the codes must be returned if they are not put into use within sixty days of assignment. Lastly, the Commission should not confer any property rights on entities which are assigned the unused N11 codes.

for NANP use. Since it is virtually inevitable that the N11 codes will be needed for such purposes, holding them in reserve would avoid confusing and frustrating consumers. It would also save the time and expense involved in having to re-educate consumers repeatedly as the uses of the N11 codes change.

Alternatively, the unused N11 codes could be made available for nationwide public service applications, such as time and temperature, telecommunications for the deaf or gas and electric utility information. The nationwide use of N11 codes for public service applications would be similar to the use of such codes today and would probably cause less confusion among consumers.

B. Alternative Abbreviated Dialing Codes Are Available

It is important to note that there is nothing magical about the N11 codes. As the Commission recognizes, "a variety of abbreviated dialing arrangements are conceivable" and can be made available to enhanced service providers and others. Notice at ¶ 19. With an all digital network, Centel is capable of providing a variety of abbreviated dialing code combinations, including vanity codes. Indeed, Centel is currently providing an abbreviated dialing arrangement ("XX#") in Las Vegas to two interexchange carriers whose customers use the codes to access the carriers from paystations.

With the widespread deployment of SS-7 and Switching Control Points ("SCPs"), the LECs' ability to offer a wide variety of abbreviated dialing codes will increase significantly. In addition, the abbreviated dialing codes made available through the use of SCPs will have the distinct advantage of number portability.^{7/} SCP access to a centralized data base will also make alternative abbreviated dialing codes more economically feasible and will allow a more efficient use of technology. The availability of these codes, coupled with the availability of vanity 800 and 900 numbers and traditional 976 information services numbers, demonstrates that there is no shortage of suitable dialing alternatives. Since alternatives are readily available, there is no need to require LECs to make the unused N11 codes available, especially since they are needed for NANP use and their use for other purposes may confuse consumers.

C. LECs Should Be Permitted to Use 411 for Any Directory Information Service

The Commission does not propose to alter the use of 411 for directory information services that are classified as basic or adjunct to basic services under the Commission's rules. Notice at ¶ 11. However, the Commission seeks comment on whether LECs should be permitted to use 411 for service offerings that would be classified as enhanced services for purposes of the rules.

Id.

Centel believes that LECs should be permitted to use 411 for all types of directory information services, regardless of ^{7/} Thus, as a customer moves between two different switches, the customer would no longer be required to change its number or forward from the old switch. The same abbreviated dialing code would simply be matched with the new seven digit number in the line information data base accessed by the SCP.

whether they would be classified as basic or enhanced services. The 411 code is used almost universally throughout the United States for LEC directory assistance services. Consumers of such services are demanding an increasing variety of new service offerings, such as reverse search and business hour listings.^{8/} LECs should be permitted to respond to this demand by expanding directory services within the existing 411 framework. By permitting LECs to use the 411 code for expanded directory services, the Commission will ensure that the consumers' need for a universal, simple and easy to remember code for directory services will continue to be satisfied. This need will not decrease merely because LEC directory services include services that may be classified as enhanced under the Commission's rules. Clearly, the interests of consumers would not be served by restricting the use of the 411 code to the provision of directory services that would be classified as basic or adjunct to basic.

III. Conclusion

Centel opposes the adoption of the Commission's proposal to require LECs to make unused N11 codes available to enhanced service providers or others. Consumers would become confused by the varying uses of the codes and would become frustrated when the codes are recalled for NANP purposes. There is also no need to make the N11 codes available since alternative abbreviated dialing arrangements are available. Finally, the Commission should permit LECs to use the 411 codes for any directory information service, regardless of whether the service would be classified as basic or enhanced under the Commission's rules.

^{8/} To date, the Commission has not ruled on the classification of reverse search services. See Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. 67 RR 2d 1558, 1560, n. 9 (Com. Car. Bur. 1990). It has ruled, however, that electronic directory assistance service that provides telephone numbers and addresses is classified as adjunct to basic under the Commission's rules. Id.
